

Utimaco Combines its solutions with Brand-new Hardware-based Hard Disk Encryption System from Seagate

- Utimaco combines its secure key management and emergency tools with Seagate's Momentus 5400 FDE solution, and is now also providing data protection for mobile media and at server level

Oberursel, June 9th 2005 - The secure handling of data on notebooks is one thing, but the administrability of the mobile computers in a company network is another. Utimaco has worked together with Seagate to combine the two aspects: Utimaco, which is the leading European supplier of IT security solutions, has combined its security technology with Seagate's latest hardware based full disk encryption solution..

For Utimaco, this partnership with Seagate is one more step in the process of anchoring mobile security in companies: Seagate's new Momentus hard disk ensures complete disk encryption. As it is all too easy to forget passwords, Utimaco provides a secure and efficient emergency system for resetting them, when the Momentus solution is implemented. A company's administrators can implement supplementary Utimaco SafeGuard® solutions to extend the encryption protection to mobile memory media and servers.

"The pressure to provide greater flexibility during daily working life means that ever more mobile personal devices are being integrated in corporate networks. This makes the optimum integration of security and administrability for the devices essential. With this joint solution we can offer our customers much more protection against hacking and system manipulation than traditional security measures", said Helmut Dansachmueller, who is responsible for strategic alliances at Utimaco, commenting on the company's cooperation with Seagate. "This cooperation, which begins at the development stage, is very important to our efforts to supply our business customers with greater security management: it means we can provide optimum security solutions."
